Lessons From the Skein of Geese...

Friendship

When geese fly together, each goose provides additional lift and reduces air resistance for their goose flying behind it.

Togetherness

When a goose flies in the V-formation it requires less effort and energy using the lifting power of it's friends.

Support

Geese take turns being the leader, as the front position expends the most energy.

Communication

Geese honk at each other to communicate during their long flight.

We are not alone

When one goose drops out of formation, two other geese will follow and protect the down goose until it is able to fly again.
